Publisher's Announcement.

The present issue of the BANKER'S MAGAZINE completes the Fiftieth Volume of this old and well-known publication, established in 1846. Although the improvements recently made in the MAGAZINE have added largely to its popularity and influence, the publisher has now perfected arrangements that will still further increase its usefulness and result in the establishment of a banking and financial magazine the superior of anything of the kind in this country, and the peer of the banking and economic magazines of the Old World.

The first and most important step in the new departure is a consolidation that has been effected between the BANKER'S MAGAZINE, the oldest bankers' publication in the United States, and RHODES' JOURNAL OF BANKING, prominent for many years as one of the leading and most widely circulated bankers' periodicals of this country. These two publications have covered substantially the same field of journalism, and by uniting their separate properties it will be possible, by a combination of the advantages and facilities of each, to furnish subscribers with a much better magazine, both in style and in editorial and statistical matter, than could possibly have been furnished by either one of them separately. The distinguishing features of each periodical will be retained, and the greater resources available under the new management will make it possible to add many new and important improvements.

Numerically, the combined circulation will be greatly in advance of either of the former magazines alone, and will include the best and most progressive bankers of America, the consolidated publication reaching practically all the prominent banks and bankers of the United States and Canada, thus affording an unrivalled medium for communicating with the banking fraternity.

All agreements with subscribers and advertisers will be faithfully carried out, and with the new departure now to be made in the line of progress and improvement, the publishers of the consolidated magazine will be able to furnish the bankers and financiers with a thoroughly representative publication that shall be one of the best and highest exponents of banking and financial literature published anywhere in the world.

The continued support of old friends and patrons is cordially requested, as every effort will be made to retain their confidence by courteous treatment and a strict adherence to the high standard of business dealings heretofore observed by the management of each of the publications.

The office will hereafter be at 78 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK, and all editorial and business communications should be sent to BRADFORD RHODES & CO., at that address.
